

I am writing to voice my agreement with FCC Commissioner Copps in condemning Sinclair Broadcasting for ordering its stations to air a biased documentary on John Kerry on the cusp of the presidential election.

If Sinclair also ordered their stations to run Micheal Moore's Fahrenheit 9-11 before the election, that would be fair, because his documentary is equally biased against the president.

Otherwise, this is a misappropriation of the public airwaves. This is not "news," it is a biased documentary and should be considered an in-kind donation to the Bush/Cheney election effort.

Because of its political bias, the FCC should consider it politically motivated and subject to campaign advertising rules, and move to preserve the integrity of public airwaves during an election cycle.
